As a native of Stone Mountain, Georgia, Dr. Webb brings his lifelong passion of interventional pain management to Metro Atlanta and the surrounding communities where he was raised.

Dr. Webb believes no one should have to suffer living with pain, and the time is now to tame the pain, regain function, and begin living.

David Webb, M.D.

Interventional Pain Management Physician

Board Certified in Anesthesiology & Pain Medicine

Fellowship Trained in Regional Anesthesiology & Acute Pain Medicine

Fellowship Trained in Interventional Pain Medicine

“Pain affects more than 76 million Americans each year - more than heart disease, cancer, and diabetes combined. This is the driving force behind my desire to influence change in a community of individuals that need and deserve relief. Pain is multifactorial, rather than solely physical. Pain affects every aspect of one’s life, including the way we think, and therefore our ability to enjoy our life to the fullest. If I can help change someone’s life, and help them realize their pain doesn’t have to define them, that’s really what it’s all about.” – David Webb, M.D.

EDUCATION

- Stephenson High School in Dekalb County
- Undergraduate at Xavier University in New Orleans, LA
- Medical School & Residency at Medical College of Georgia in Augusta, GA
